criminal behavioral profiling written by well established authors curt and anne bartol presents a realistic and empirically based look at the theory research and practice of modern criminal profiling or as it s more professionally termed behavioral analysis or behavioral investigative analysis designed for use in a variety of criminal justice and psychology courses the book delves into the process of identifying distinctive behavioral tendencies geographical locations demographic and biographical descriptors of offenders and personality traits based on characteristics of the crime timely literature and case studies from the rapidly growing international research in criminal profiling help students understand the best practices major pitfalls and psychological concepts that are key to this process back cover in this text we focus on criminal behavior and antisocial behavior because antisocial behavior is not always criminal from a psychological perspective more specifically adults and juveniles who violate the law or who act antisocially are portrayed as embedded in and continually influenced by multiple systems within the psychosocial environment meaningful theory well executed research and skillful application of knowledge to the crime problem require an understanding of the many levels of events that influence a person's life course from the individual to the individual's family peers schools neighborhoods community culture and society as a whole causal explanations are essential for theory building in focusing on causal mechanisms rather than descriptive effects the goal of this volume is to increase our theoretical understanding of the way gender operates in interaction theoretical analyses of gender's effects in interaction in turn are necessary to understand how such effects might be implicated with individual level and social structural level processes in the larger system of gender inequality despite other differences the contributors to this book all take what might be loosely called a microstructural approach to gender and interaction all agree that individuals come to interaction with certain common socially created beliefs cultural meanings experiences and social rules these include stereotypes about gendered activities and skills beliefs about the status value of gender rules for interacting in certain settings and so on however as individuals apply these beliefs and rules to the specific contingent events of interaction they combine and reshape their implications in distinctive ways that are particular to the encounter as a result individuals actively construct their social relations in the encounter through their interaction the patterns of relations that develop are not completely determined or scripted in advance by the beliefs and rules of the larger society consequently there is a reciprocal causal relationship between constructed patterns of interaction and larger social structural forms the constructed patterns of social relations among a set of interactants can be thought of as micro level social structures or more simply microstructures across america crime is a consistent public concern the authors have produced a comprehensive work on major criminological theories combining classical criminology with new topics such as internet crime and terrorism the text also focuses on how criminology shapes public policy criminal profiling provides a thorough and up to date overview of profiling in criminal justice by focusing on different styles of profiling whose underpinnings rely on behavioral and geographical theories it is designed to provide police and others in criminal justice with an understanding of the consistency of behavior at the crime scene the consistent nature of criminal motivations how criminals work in familiar geographic areas and how to construct a timeline of events profiling attempts to generate an identifiably consistent personality pattern based on principal character traits inferred from behavior at the crime scene leading to the predictability of future criminal behavior the three main types of profiling used in criminal justice crime scene analysis fbi profiling investigative psychology and geographic profiling are explained and analyzed and the essential role of victimology and case linkage is emphasized special consideration is given to three primary assumptions behavioral consistency behavioral distinctiveness and homology that underlie the effectiveness of different approaches to criminal profiling practical and approachable this book brings together the theory and practice of criminal profiling it is suitable for students in criminal profiling and other investigative courses and equips both future and present investigators with the tools to use profiling principles to their fullest advantage for 15 years and through two editions this handbook has been indispensable for serious students of leadership now in this third edition Bass introduces a decade of new findings on the newest theories and models of leadership with over 1 200 pages of essential information Bass Stogdill's handbook of leadership will continue to be the definitive resource for managers for years to come this book the second volume in the set offers an in depth global analysis of femicide and feminicide from legal sociological and criminological perspectives it addresses the lack of coverage of forensic investigation case solvability forensic evidence and victimological approaches volume ii not only focuses on descriptive aspects of femicide and feminicide but also tackles practical issues related to access to justice and the importance of forensic methods in solving feminicide cases by expanding on current developments in gender based murder it integrates applied forensic and legal settings adopting a victim centered approach to explain contexts of victimization in court it is ideal for professionals working in legal and forensic settings towards gender based victimization it serves also as a handbook for students in areas related to forensic areas such as legal and forensic medicine criminalistics criminology and criminal law in the aftermath of Martinson's 1974 'nothing works' doctrine scholars have made a concerted effort to develop an evidence based corrections theory and practice to show what works to change offenders perhaps the most important contribution to this effort was made by a group of Canadian psychologists most notably Donald Andrews James Bonta and Paul Gendreau who developed a treatment paradigm called the risk need responsivity (RNR) model which became the dominant theory of correctional treatment this approach was more recently challenged by a perspective developed by Tony Ward Shadd Maruna and others called the good lives model (GLM) based in part on desistance research and positive psychology this model proposes to rehabilitate offenders by building on the strengths offenders possess GLM proponents see the RNR model as a deficit model that fixes dynamic risk factors rather than identifying what offenders value most and using these positive factors to pull them out of crime through a detailed examination of both models theoretical and correctional frameworks the future of correctional rehabilitation moving beyond the RNR model and good lives model debate probes the extent to which the models offer incompatible or compatible approaches to offender treatment and suggests how to integrate the RNR and GLM approaches to build a new and hopefully more effective vision for offender treatment a foreword by renowned criminologist francis t cullen helps put the material into context this book will be of much interest to scholars and students studying correctional rehabilitation as well as practitioners working with offenders this text explores the psychological factors affecting criminal behaviour using a cognitive behavioural and interactionist approach it moves from theoretical explanations and descriptions of crime toward empirical research on specific criminal offences
